

THE EXPULSION OF SENATOR DAVIS.

Our readers are aware that a resolution has been introduced into the United States Senate by Senator Wilson, for the expulsion from that body of Garrett Davis, a Senator from Kentucky. The cause for this was the introduction to the Senate by Mr. Davis of a resolution containing those words: "That the people of the North ought to revolt against the war leaders, and take this great matter into their own hands." We do not see how more seditions or treasonable language could have been crowded into so short a paragraph, and if the extract is not unfairly garbled, we cannot imagine why there should be muchtime spent in debating the resolution, or any doubt about its passage, as our morning dispatch seems to indicate. So far as those words go, the arch traitor, Jeff. Davis himself could not beat them, and we really hope that Mr. Davis, if he wishes to indulge in treason will be compelled to consort with his great, but meanly great namesake, whose such language is perfectly congenial.

Railroads of the United States.

The American Railroad Journal sums up the actual mileage of railroads completed in the United States on the 1st of January, 1864, at 33,860 miles, with about 16,000 miles additional that are or have been, under construction. The increase of completed roads during the past year has been 1,390 miles. Of the completed roads 24,927 miles are in the loyal States, and 8,933 miles in the States now in rebellion. The condition of the latter is such that many of them, on the return of the States to loyalty, could be more properly classed among the roads "under construction." The total cost of the completed roads and their equipment in the United States, is ONE THOUSAND TWO HUNDRED AND SIXTY-SIX MILLION DOLLARS—quite a respectable sum of money to be invested in one branch of business.

Taking the grand total of roads completed and under construction in the several States, Ohio stands pre-eminent as the Railroad State, but falls behind Pennsylvania in the number of miles completed. The following are the railroad statistics of the five great railroad States:

Total Miles.	Miles Com'd.
Ohio,	4,350
Pennsylvania,	3,367
Illinois,	4,071
New York,	3,609
Indiana,	2,570

It is interesting to note the growth of the railway interest of the United States. From 1826 to 1829 there were but three miles of railway in the country. On the 1st of January, 1834, there were 762 miles; in 1844 the number had increased to 4,311 miles; in 1854 to 15,675 miles; and on the 1st of January, 1864, the amount of completed railway had grown to 33,860 miles with 16,000 more miles in progress.

Official Salaries—Ought they to be Raised.

Under the above caption the New York Tribune, takes strong, and we think just ground, in opposition to any rise in the salaries of government employees in the various departments in Washington. There is an urgent necessity, in the present condition of the country, that the most rigid economy should be practiced in carrying on the machinery of government. Of necessity the expenditures are enormous, but the financial burden which the country is laboring under should not be increased by even a dollar, if it can possibly be avoided. All, whether rich or poor, in the various walks of life outside of Washington, are called upon in no stinted measure to contribute of their substance for the purpose of carrying on this struggle, and we see no reason why the employees in the departments at Washington should be a privileged class in this respect. The Tribune concludes its article as follows:

"Now we say to the office-holders that they must share the burden with everybody else. To raise their salaries so as to enable them to live as well as the incumbents of the same places did four years ago, is simply to shield them from paying their share of the cost of the war. The thing can't be done; if it is, we do not wish to see it done." Now, then, we say that the compensation of officials of all other service shall be regulated by the law of supply and demand. You pay a dollar, perhaps for making a vest; not judging what sum would enable the widow who makes it to support her seven small children comfortably; but what sum will buy in the open market that amount and class of work. If the usual price of making such a vest as you want is ten shillings, it is bad economy and bad morality in you to seek to get it done for a dollar. But if the latter is the ruling price, you are not required to pay any more.

And what is your right if you are right for the Government. If official compensation at Washington is so low that competent persons cannot be induced to do the needed work for the stipulated pay, then it is right to increase it; not otherwise. If those who now hold clerkships choose to throw them up and betake themselves to farming, teaching, or fighting, we heartily approve their choice. Then let the Government advertise that it is in want of honest, reputable, loyal persons of such and such caliber, to whom it will pay such and such wages; and, if the men are not forthcoming, we will justify an increase of salaries. But woe to him who recommends or votes for an increase while competent persons can be found to do the work faithfully for the prices hitherto paid!"

A FEDERAL OFFICER is under arrest in New Orleans charged with stealing and selling sutler's stores. The culprit belongs to a Massachusetts regiment, is an abolitionist, and of course "worthy of his steal."

—Madison Patriot.

THE EXPULSION OF SENATOR DAVIS.

Our readers are aware that a resolution has been introduced into the United States Senate by Senator Wilson, for the expulsion from that body of Garrett Davis, a Senator from Kentucky. The cause for this was the introduction to the Senate by Mr. Davis of a resolution containing those words, "the people of the North ought to revolt against the war leaders, and take this great matter into their own hands." We do not see how more seditious or treasonable language could have been crowded into so short a paragraph, and if the extract is not unfairly garbled, we cannot imagine why there should be much time spent in debating the resolution, or why doubt about its passage, as our morning dispatches seem to indicate. So far as these words go, the arch traitor, Jeff. Davis himself, could not beat them, and we really hope that Mr. Davis, if he wishes to indulge in treason will be compelled to consort with his great, but meanly great, namesake, where such language is perfectly congenial.

Railroads of the United States.

The American Railroad Journal sums up the actual mileage of railroads completed in the United States on the 1st of January, 1864, at 33,860 miles, with about 10,000 miles additional that are or have been, under construction. The increase of completed roads during the past year has been 1,390 miles. Of the completed roads 24,927 miles are in the loyal States, and 8,933 miles in the States now in rebellion. The condition of the latter is such that many of them, on the return of the States to loyalty, could be more properly classed among the roads "under construction." The total cost of the completed roads and their equipment in the United States, is ONE THOUSAND TWO HUNDRED AND SIXTY-SIX MILLION DOLLARS—quite a respectable sum of money to be invested in one branch of business.

Taking the grand total of roads completed and under construction in the several States, Ohio stands pre-eminent as the Railroad State, but falls behind Pennsylvania in the number of miles completed. The following are the railroad statistics of the five great railroad States:—

Total Miles.	Miles Com'd.
Ohio,	4,550
Pennsylvania,	4,071
Illinois,	3,590
New York,	3,506
Indiana,	2,570

It is interesting to note the growth of the railway interest of the United States. From 1826 to 1829 there were but three miles of railway in the country. On the 1st of January, 1834, there were 763 miles; in 1844 the number had increased to 4,311 miles; in 1854 to 15,675 miles; and on the 1st of January, 1864, the amount of completed railway had grown to 33,860 miles with 10,000 more miles in progress.

Official Salaries—Ought they to be Raised.

Under the above caption the New York Tribune, takes strong, and we think just ground, in opposition to any rise in the salaries of government employees in the various departments in Washington. There is an urgent necessity, in the present condition of the country, that the most rigid economy should be practiced in carrying on the machinery of government. Of necessity the expenditures are enormous, but the financial burden which the country is laboring under should not be increased by even a dollar, if it can possibly be avoided. All, whether rich or poor, in the various walks of life outside of Washington, are called upon in no stinted measure to contribute of their substance for the purpose of carrying on this struggle, and we see no reason why the employees in the departments at Washington should be a privileged class in this respect. The Tribune concludes its article as follows:—

"Now we say to the office-holders that they must share the burden with everybody else. To raise their salaries so as to enable them to live as well as the incumbents of the same places did four years ago, is simply to shield them from paying their share of the cost of the war. The thing cannot be done; if it is, it is too to those by whom it shall be done!"

Now, then, we insist that the compensation of officials of all other service shall be regulated by the law of supply and demand. You pay a dollar, perhaps for making a vest; not judging what sum would enable the widow who makes it to support her seven small children comfortably; but what sum will buy in the open market that amount and class of work. If it is usual price of making such a vest as you want is ten shillings, it is bad economy and bad morality in you to seek to get it done for a dollar. But if the latter is the ruling price, you are not required to pay any more.

And what is right for you is right for the Government. If official compensation at Washington is so low that competent persons cannot be induced to do the needed work for the stipulated pay, then it is right to increase it; not otherwise. If those who now hold clerkships choose to throw them up and betake themselves to farming, teaching, or fighting, we heartily approve their choice. Then let the Government advertise that it is in want of honest, reputable, loyal persons, of such and such capacities, to whom it will pay such and such wages; and if the men are not forthcoming, we will justify an increase of salaries. But too to him who recommends or votes for an increase while competent persons can be found to do the work faithfully for the prices hitherto paid!"

A FEDERAL OFFICER is under arrest in New Orleans charged with stealing and selling sanitary stores; or in other words, robbing sick soldiers. The culprit belongs to a Massachusetts regiment, an abolitionist, and of course "worthy of his steal."—Madison Patriot.

It is an old and true saying that "it takes a rogue to catch a rogue," and in conformity with this fact we don't know of any better party to smell out a steal than the Patriot. It speaks well for the virtue of abolitionists that after two years of industrious hunting the Patriot has only found one "abolitionist," worthy of his steal.

Power of the American People and the future of our Country.

Henry Ward Beecher, in his masterly discourse at the New York Academy of Music, uttered such gems as the following, which will forever sparkle in the history of American eloquence and patriotism:—

Next, it was very much a fear, which I found very widely prevalent, that we were a dangerous nation by reason of the gigantic power that was being developed among us. I suppose there never was a people that was so strong; there never was a nation that had such a promise. On what an outline is that that God is marking on this continent, yet in its boyhood! And when all those bones shall have grown into flint, and all those muscles shall have been built up, and when this nation from ocean to ocean is knit and united together, standing on the great foundations of freedom, and virtue, and intelligence, and where there is room for such a nation, and where there is room for such another on the face of the globe? And I conceive that Europe has an interest in asking, what is the disposition of such a power as that? For when we are so full of it, if we are united on a free foundation, our tread will be like the tread of an elephant among mice. We set out for the haven of universal liberty, and by the storms of intestine slavery we have been drifted far out of our course; but at last the skies are clear, and now shall we go back, or shall we take a fresh observation from clouds and sun of liberty and take the shortest path to the haven. That is the question to us. I know what the answer will be. We shall not turn aside.—Burdens we have yet to bear, losses we have yet to feel, sorrows yet will bring our hearts, sons must yet fall in the battle and be lowered in the grave, martyrs to liberty; but as the grave closes over sons so priceless we will not be bribed by anything on earth; we will have liberty on this continent from the lake to the gulf; liberty that will smooth every grave, comfort every heart, a reward in death, and in the smiles of men we shall see the outshining of God's smile, and there shall be great peace because of party and liberty. God bless the Union and make it free.

GENERAL PARAGRAPHS.

The steamer Oregon has arrived at San Francisco with $200,000 in treasure from Oregon, and $73,000 from British Columbia. She brings news that on the 16th of December the small town of Port Angeles, Washington Territory, was nearly swept away by a torrent of water bursting from a gorge in the mountains near the bay. The Custom House, a large two-story building, was destroyed. Collector Gunn escaped, but Deputy Inspector and two men were drowned. The dwelling of Mr. Victor Smith was destroyed, his family barely escaping.

The Croton Board of New York city laid last year 28,546 feet of water pipe; the total length of mains now in use is 206 miles. The new reservoir now holds 1,000,000,000 of gallons, all others, 195,000,000. The city demands 52,405,517 gallons per day, about 60 gallons, or two barrels for each inhabitant. The New Yorkers ought to be a clean people, with clean streets, but they are not. The amount received from water rents and penalties was $380,958.90, being an increase over the previous year of $97,723.30.

The most important act of the year was the proclamation of emancipation, so long promised, which saw the light contemporary with the advent of the year. Next in importance was the proclamation of amnesty, which was made in the message of the President, on December 2d. The results of the former, as a military measure, have been apparent wherever our armies have penetrated, and the high ways have been thronged by the oppressed negroes seeking shelter and protection within the Federal lines. The full fruits of the latter mission have not been made apparent, as yet, but no one doubts that when its provisions are generally known and understood, there will be immediate and great practical results therefrom.

JANUARY.

were the withdrawal of General Sherman from before Vicksburg, and his movement upon Arkansas Post; the victory at Stone River, Tennessee, by Rosecrans; the relief of Burnside by Hooker; and the assignment of General Banks to the Department of the Gulf. Upon the ocean, the Alabama continued her depredations, and the Florida commenced her cruising during the month. General McClellan took his initial steps for the siege of Vicksburg about the middle of the month.

FEBRUARY.

the bombardment of Vicksburg was commenced and the gunboats of Admiral Porter's fleet began to play havoc with the enemy's transportation below Vicksburg. Important Congressional measures were adopted during the month, including the national currency bill, conscription act, and the bill indemnifying the President for suspending the habeas corpus.

MARCH.

the military operations were confined to General Grant's immediate department, and Kentucky, where General Burnside took his corps during the middle of the month. General Grant's bayonet and overland canal expeditions were failures.

APRIL.

Admiral Farragut co-operated with Porter below Vicksburg, and rendered important service. Gen. Banks commenced his movement into Western Louisiana, and General Grant prepared to move and did, at the latter part of the month, move upon the enemy's works at Vicksburg; General Sherman made a foray into Virginia, Richmondward; Colonel Straight made his foray into Alabama; General Rosecrans advanced his line to Me. Minville; and the army of the Potomac was made ready for an advance upon Chambersville.

MAY.

opened with a battle at Chambersville; on the 1st the Federal flag was borne within the lines of fortifications at Richmond, nearer than it ever was before or has been since. Colonel Grierson finished his foray and entered Baton Rouge in triumph. Admiral Porter and General Grant were meeting with brilliant success below and to the East of Vicksburg; General Banks finished up his West Louisiana campaign by the capture of Alexandria, and commenced the siege of Port Hudson. While all was activity in the West and South, all was passive in Virginia.

JUNE.

Lee invaded Maryland and Pennsylvania; the army of the Potomac started in pursuit; General Rosecrans commenced a forward movement and compelled Bragg to flee before him; Gen. Grant, having invested Vicksburg, was sitting down there waiting for the over-ripe fruit to drop into his hands; Gen. Banks, less patiently, was prosecuting the siege of Port Hudson. All the operations in the West gave bright promise for victory, while in the East all was doubt and fear that Lee would not be checked in his mad career. The privates were unusually active and bold during this month, and the Tacony especially was lighting up the ocean with the flame of her captures.

JULY.

entered upon its career, however, when that which was full of expectation hope gave glorious fight, and that which was doubt vanished. Vicksburg and Port Hudson surrendered; Lee's army was whipped at Gettysburg, and the invasion of the North was at an end; Gen. Gilmore had commenced operations before Charleston, and met with unexpected success; Gen. Rosecrans had driven Bragg out of Tennessee; John Morgan, after his foray into Indiana and Ohio, fell a victim to his rashness; the career of the Tacony ended in flames, and that of her successor, the Archer, in capture after her foray into North Carolina. There was but one thing to cloud upon all this sunshine, and that was the draft-riots in New York, Boston and Troy.

AUGUST.

Gen. Burnside made his movement into East Tennessee preparatory to the occupation of that oppressed region. Gen. Blunt and Steele were moving rapidly and successfully through Arkansas; the Mississippi was declared open for trade. Gen. Meade was giving the Confederates lessons in creek. There was but little to mourn and much cause for rejoicing, always excepting, however, the depredations of the rebel privateers.

SEPTEMBER.

Chatanooga fell, and Knoxville was made happy by the triumphant entry of Gen. Burnside into their midst; the battle of Chickamauga was fought and its results created the most fearful apprehensions for the safety of Gen. Rosecrans, which were relieved by the timely reinforcement by Gen. Hooker; the cold shoulder had been so repeatedly given Mason that Jeff. Davis deemed it advisable to recall him from England, and thus our foreign relations improved. This month marked an era in our history—the arrival of our Russian allies—at which there was sincere cause for congratulation.

OCTOBER.

the monotony with the army of the Potomac was relieved by the attempt on the part of Lee, to execute a flank movement, in which he failed; General Grant entered upon the active duties of his new command at Chattanooga, and General Hooker achieved a victory at the base of Lookout mountain; General Banks was making the initial movements for his Texas campaign; General Gilmore, having reduced Sumter to a harmless ruin, employed himself in alternately shelling it and Charleston; and the navy was winning new laurels by multiplying the capture of blockade runners.

NOVEMBER.

General Banks occupied important positions in Texas, where he has secure basis of operation. Longstreet committed the error of attempting the siege of Knoxville; General Grant won the victories of Chattanooga and sent Bragg fleeing to Dalton; General Meade and Lee pursued the game of draughts with the sacred soil of the checker board; and the captures of blockade runners continued to multiply.

DECEMBER.

was devoted to clearing up the debris of the various campaigns, and preparing for winter quarters. Thus we close the record for the year. We have gained much territory, and lost none. We are in the full tide of prosperity; have unlimited means, a noble and veteran army; a confident and happy people. Our military and political ledger forms a marked contrast to the record of the rebel States. Our enemy is in despair at his situation, and if all goes as well as it has done during the year, we may confidently expect that before the year 1864 shall close we shall witness the end of this rebellion.
